Colour is fundamental to our world and is my inspiration. It is through colour, that I interpret how my chosen subject influences my creative process, and through colour, I am able to initiate my own responses.

My pictures whether in oil or watercolour, are born from close observation of life around me, and I translate these images into my own language.

I visualise my work in layers of colour, long before a form appears. By layering, scraping and working with wet paint, I build the image between the planes and the surface texture.

It's the physicality which creates an ambiguous vision, that rests within the surface of the painting, yet
